Hd video status download for whatsapp

You'll no longer need to download videos on WhatsApp to watch them – the app rolls out with a handy new feature that lets you stream videos while the video downloads to your device. After just a few weeks of testing in India, the feature has gone live for all Android WhatsApp users. One of the most important issues with WhatsApp has long been how it handles video and the new feature should help make watching videos on WhatsApp much more convenient and beat a few seconds of waiting time between being sent a video and being able to watch that video. The new streaming feature works in several ways. If you have your app set to automatically download media when you receive it, the message will start downloading to your device when it arrives and you will see the progress meter at the bottom left of the display, as usual. Now, however, even before that video has been downloaded, you will be able to start watching it. Then, once the download is completed, the progress bar will be replaced by a video duration indicator. However, if you don't have the app set to automatically download media, you will still see the play button and will be able to stream the video when it arrives, but it won't actually download to your device automatically. To make it happen, you need to press the download button on the lower left corner of the display. WhatsApp has traditionally been a bit slow in implementing new features. But in recent months that seems to have changed a bit. In October, for example, it added the possibility of video call contacts, a feature that had long been asked for. In addition, the WhatsApp update for Android also provides users with animated GIF support. That means you can now send a GIF through the file attach button, and what's more, you can even edit it in advance (or at least crop it). And if you're particularly proud of a particular GIF, WhatsApp now gives you an Animated GIF folder where you can store your favorites. Download the latest version from the Google Play Store. Article originally published in November. Updated on 12-6-2016 by Lulu Chang: Added the news that the feature has now gone live. Editors recommendations WhatsApp is an application used to communicate with contacts. It supports voice notes, pictures, videos, documents, and more. It's a great way to avoid annoying prices for text messages. WhatsApp kicks text messages to the curb and embraces communication over the Internet. WhatsApp provides a simple platform for talking to friends when there is a distance between you and them. When you don't have your cell phone at hand, the version for Windows is a great replacement. It requires that the phone is connected to the Internet, however, other than that it acts as a charm. The app is packed with lots of features. Some options, such as LINE, have a lot in common. Sending pictures, voice notes, and documents is just a few. WhatsApp strengthens the list by adding such as location sharing, encrypted messages, video calls, and company profiles. It's easy to get started with the program. All you have to do is open the app on your phone, and point it at a QR code provided by the Windows version. Now it's time. You're ready to start using one of the best communication apps. Something a little frustrating, is that other competitors get one thing right. Telegram, for example, doesn't force you to keep your phone connected. So, when your phone takes on battery or gets lost, you're really unlucky with WhatsApp. This program still finds a way to top the charts as one of the most downloaded apps in the world. Where can you run this program? It can run on Windows 7 and later. It is also available for Android, iPhone, and Mac.Is it a better option? No. WhatsApp has everything you need. However, Telegram provides better security options. WhatsApp is simply amazing. Here's everything you need to stay in touch with your friends and loved ones. Are you going to download it? Yes. It is lightweight, easy to use, and works very well. You want to download it if you need a free way to communicate with someone in the world. Although you can save Facebook posts to watch later, sometimes you want to download a video that you have found on your feed. Whether it's a how-to video that you want to save to when you're working on a project, or a fun video that you want to share with friends, you can download Facebook videos from your feed to your device with just a few simple steps. How to download a video from Facebook using a computer This trick only works on Facebook.com and does not work on the application, so you have to go to Facebook in your browser, first. Then you will find the video you want to download and right click on the video. Then click the View Video URL option. A small box with the video URL will pop up. Copy the link, and then paste it into a new tab or window address bar. Then, change the www in the address of mbasec. So, for example, if the video's URL is you will change it to . When you're done, press Enter on your keyboard. What this does is change the address of a mobile basic interface address, which then allows you to download the video. If you did it right, the screen will look a bit of fun. as you try to look at the Facebook app on your browser. Next, right-click the video and select Open Link in new tab from the menu. In the new tab, the video will not have any of the Facebook extensions like comments and a similar button. It's just going to be the video. From there, right click on the video and select Save Video as ... from the menu. Then, save it to your computer as you would normally any other video or photo. Now you can play the video using any video player you have installed on To download a Facebook video from the app If you don't have a computer, computer, from the app using the phone will require some help. First, you'll need to download a third-party app to your phone that gives the Facebook app extra features. For this demonstration, we used the Friendly app for Facebook. Once the app has been downloaded, it will ask you to log into your Facebook account. Log in as you normally would. Then the app will open Up Facebook and it will look exactly like you're using the Facebook app. Then you will find the video you want to download. At the bottom of the video post you will see a small alien icon next to the share button. Tap the alien icon. From the menu that pops up, tap the video Downloading... Option. Now it's time. The video will download and save to your phone. Editors recommendations WhatsApp is a beast when it comes to communication. That is undoubtedly what really gave phone calls a backseat to messages. Now it's added video calls on Android to bring back more intimate communication. WhatsApp calling availability was first discovered by Android Police who report that it is in beta on Android. If you have build 2.16.318 or newer then you should know video calls. Just remember the person at the other end will need an updated version of the app as well. As you can imagine WhatsApp makes the process super simple, just like its normal calling service. Best Android apps: supercharge your phone with these appsWhatsApp video calls: How to easily make a contact within the app, press the call button, and select Video Call. It will then start as a FaceTime call. If you don't want the app to notify you if the person on the other end needs to update their app. Remember when calls were first launched on WhatsApp and it was a bit of a laggy mess? Expect the same issues to show up for video calls on less stable connections. But also expect them to get fixed because this is becoming more efficient and is being used by more and more people. The selfie made it more acceptable to keep the phone up in front of your face in public. Maybe this will make video calling the norm, just as sci-fi movies of the past showed us the future would offer. If you want to get the latest WhatsApp build to update your phone, or to send to a friend you want of video chat with, then download apk here and enjoy.via AndroidPolice The long awaited video-calling feature in WhatsApp has finally arrived. We've turned a new page on the calendar, Old Man '20 is on the doorstep, and there's a feeling '21 is going to be a great year – and so far, so good. Markets closed in 2020 with modest session gains to cap off larger annual profits. S & P 500 rose 16% during the coronacrisis year, while the NASDAQ, with its heavy tech representation, showed an impressive annual gain of nearly 43%. The advent of two viable COVID vaccines is fueling an increase in general optimism. Wall Street's top analysts have cast their in the stock market, find the gems that investors should give serious consideration in this new year. These are analysts with 5-star ratings from TipRanks TipRanks and they point out the stocks with Stark Buy ratings – in short, this is where investors can expect to find stock growth over the next 12 months. We're talking returns of at least 70% over the next 12 months, according to analysts. ElectraMeccanica Vehicles (SOLO)Electric vehicles, EVs, are growing more popular as consumers look for alternatives to the traditional combustion leg engine. While electric cars simply move the combustion source from under the hood to the electric power plant, they offer real benefits for drivers: they offer greater acceleration, more torque, and they are more energy efficient, converting up to 60% of their battery energy into forward motion. These advantages, as EV technology improves, begin to outweigh the disadvantages of shorter range and expensive battery packs. ElectraMeccanica, a small-cap manufacturer from British Columbia, is the designer and marketer of Solo, a single location, three-wheeled EV built for the urban commuter market. Technically, the Solo is classed as an electric motorcycle – but it's fully enclosed, with a door on either side, has a trunk, air conditioning, and a Bluetooth connection, and travels up to 100 miles on a single charge at speeds up to 80 miles per hour. The charging time is low, less than 3 hours, and the vehicle is priced at less than $20,000.Starting in Q3 2020, the company delivered its first shipment of vehicles to the United States, and expanded to six additional U.S. urban markets, including San Diego, CA and Scottsdale and Glendale, AZ. ElectraMeccanica also opened four new storefronts in the United States – 2 in Los Angeles, one in Scottsdale, and one in Portland, OR. In addition, the company has begun design and marketing work on a fleet version of Solo, targeting the commercial fleet and car rental markets starting in the first half of this year. Craig Irwin, 5-star analyst at Roth Capital, is impressed by SOLO's potential applications in the fleet market. He writes about this opening, we believe that the pandemic is a tailwind for fast food chains exploring better delivery options. Chains look to avoid third-party delivery costs and balance the brand identity implications of operator-vs. company-owned vehicles. SOLO's 100-mile interval, low operating cost and STD telematics make the vehicle a good fit, in our opinion, especially when location data can be integrated into a chain's kitchen software. We wouldn't be surprised if SOLO made a couple of announcements with large chains after customers validate plans. Irwin puts a Buy rating on SOLO, supported by his $12.25 price target which means a 98% upside potential for the stock in 2021. (To look at Irwin's track record, click here) Speculative tech is popular on Wall Street, and ElectraMeccanica fits that bill nicely. The company has 3 recent reviews, and all are Buys, making the analyst consensus a unanimous Strong Buy. Shares are priced at $6.19 and have an average target of $9.58, making a year up 55%. (See Stock analysis at TipRanks)Nautilus Group (NLS)Based in Washington State, this fitness equipment manufacturer has seen a massive stock gain in 2020, as its shares soared by more than 900% over the course of the year, also accounting for recent dips in stock value. Nautilus got that social lockdown policy took hold and the gym was shuttered in the name of stopping or slowing the spread of COVID-19. The company, which owns major home fitness brands like Bowflex, Schwinn, and the eponymous Nautilus, offered home-bound fitness buffs the equipment needed to stay fit. The stock strengthening accelerated in 2H20, after the company's revenue showed a recovery from Q1 losses due to the coronal recession. In the second quarter, the top line hit $114 million, up 22% sequentially; in Q3, revenue reached $155, for a 35% sequential profit and a massive profit of 151% compared to the previous year. Earnings were just as strong, with Q3's $1.04 PROFIT beating coming in well over the year-since the quarter's 30-cent loss. Look at this stock for Lake Street Capital's 5-star analyst Mark Smith, who is bullish on this stock. Smith is particularly aware of the recent dip in the stock price, and that one can sense that the stock is now at its peak – making it attractive to investors. Nautilus reported blowout results for 3Q:20 with strength above its portfolio... We believe the company has orders and lags to drive high sales and earnings for the coming quarters and believe we have seen a fundamental change in consumer exercise-at-home behavior. We would see the recent withdrawal as a buying opportunity, Smith opined. Smith's $40 price target supports his Buy rating, and indicates a robust 120% a year-up potential. (To look at Smith's track record, click here) The unanimous Strong Buy consensus rating shows that Wall Street agrees with Smith on Nautilus' potential. The stock has 4 recent reviews, and all are to buy. Shares closed out in 2020 with a price of $18.14, and the average target of $30.25 suggests that the stock has room for –67% up growth in 2021. (See NLS share analysis at TipRanks) KAR Auction Services (KAR)Last but not least is KAR Auction Services, a car auction company, which operates online and physical marketplaces to connect buyers and sellers. KAR sells to both business buyers and individual consumers, offering vehicles for a variety of uses: commercial fleets, private travel, even the other had parts market. In 2019, the last year for which full-year figures are available, KAR sold 3.7 million vehicles for $2.8 billion in total auction revenue. The ongoing coronacrisis, with its social closure policy, put a damper on car travel and reduced demand for used vehicles in the market segments. KAR shares backed 13 percent in 2020, during a year of volatile trading. In the latest 3Q20 report, the company at $593.6 million, down over 15% year-over-year. Third-quarter earnings, though at 23 cents per share earnings, were down less, 11% on an annual rate, and showed a sequential recovery from the Q2 EPS loss of 25 cents. As the new vaccines promise one on the COVID pandemic later this year, and the suspension of lockdown and local travel restrictions, the mid-long-term outlook for the used car market and for KAR Auctions is brightening, according to Truist analyst Stephanie Benjamin.The 5-star analysts noted, Our estimates now assume that the volume recovery will occur in 2021 vs. 4Q20 according to our previous estimates... Overall, we believe that the 3Q results reflect that KAR is well implemented on the initiatives within its control, especially improving its cost structure and transforming into a pure digital auction model. Looking further ahead, she adds, ... mismanagement and payment violations for auto loans and leases have increased and we believe will serve as a meaningful volume tailwind in 2021 as repo activity resumes. In addition, repo vehicles generally require ancillary services that should provide higher RPU. This access influx should also help dampen the spent pricing environment and push dealers to fill up their lots, which remain at three-year lows from an inventory standpoint. In line with these comments, Benjamin sets a $32 price target, which means a high 71% a year up potential to the stock, and car prices as a buy. (To look at Benjamin's track record, click here) Wall Street is generally willing to speculate on KAR's future, as evidenced by recent reviews, which shared 5 to 1 Buy to Hold, and make analyst consensus show a strong buy. KAR sells for $18.61, and its $24.60 average price target suggests it has room to grow 32% from that level. Chinese EV maker NINE Inc – ADR (NYSE: NIO) announced record monthly deliveries for December that underscored the strong momentum the company is experiencing. What happened: Nine shipments climbed 121% year-on-year to 7,007 vehicles in December, the company said in a press release Sunday. Total unit deliveries included 2,009 ES8s, 2,493 ES6s and 2,505 units of its recently launched EC6s.Seventially increased deliveries by 32.43% from the 5,291 vehicles delivered in November. The company noted that it reported a two-fold growth year-over-year for the ninth consecutive month. 2020 has been a challenging year for the whole world. Against this backdrop, NIO has achieved consecutive record levels on the road, and closed the year on a high note with remarkable December deliveries of over 7,000 vehicles, said William Bin Li, founder, chairman and CEO of NIO in a press release. For the fourth quarter, the company delivered 17,353 vehicles, representing an increase of 111% compared to the same quarter. The company's previous guidance had estimated quarterly deliveries would be 16,500 to 17,000 units. Growing recognition of Nio's premium brand, competitive and compelling products and services, and a growing sales network contributed to the strong development, the company said in the press release. Nine noted that its battery-as-a-service system has been popular with its customers since its launch. After adding an opportunity to provide a 100-kilowatt-hour battery pack, penetration of BaaS reached about 40% of its new orders in December.In 2020, the company delivered 43,728 vehicles, a 112.6% year-over-year increase. Economist Robert ShillerBy at least one popular investing metric, U.S. stocks have only been this expensive another time in history, and it didn't end well the first time. According to the cyclically adjusted price-to-earnings ratio - a measure of market value based on 10 years of capped earnings data - the S&P 500 is at its second most expensive point in history. Related Link: Will Tesla Destabilize S&Amp;; P 500? S & The P 500's current CAPE of 34 has only been surpassed another time, during the peak of the dot-com bubble in 2000. Today's CAPE is more than double the S& The P 500 historical average and significantly higher than its peak of about 30 just before the Black Tuesday market crash back in 1929.Many investors still remember the painful fallout from the dot-com bubble. But just because the market is overvalued doesn't necessarily mean it's time to start selling or shorting SPDR S P 500 ETF Trust (NYSE: SPY). Shillers Take: Nobelprisbelånade ekonomen Robert Robert refers to the cape ratio as a measure of market valuation so often that it is commonly referred to as the Shiller ratio. In a recent interview with CNBC, Shiller said an expensive market doesn't necessarily mean it's time to dump stocks. The market is highly priced, but it's not so high that I wouldn't consider it an investment. Shiller said in December. Shiller is known for his study of psychology investments, especially during financial market bubbles. While widespread coronavirus vaccinations will certainly be a fundamental change for the U.S. economy, Shiller said he is concerned about how quickly investors expect the economy to fully recover once the nation is vaccinated. He reckons fears related to the virus will linger among U.S. consumers for at least a year. CAPE'S SHORTCOMINGS: Equity income has historically been discounted by a cost of capital tied to interest rates. After an emergency cut in March, interest rates are now mainly at 0%. It makes no sense to compare 2020 to previous periods, at least as naively as Shiller PE does, without acknowledging that 10-year government bonds yield 1% now and were higher at any other point [in history], DataTrek Research co-founder Nicholas Colas said Wednesday.While CAPE really gives a relative indication of market value, it also hasn't been the best indicator of when to buy and sell shares. Because it contains a decade of performance data, CAPE tends to be relatively slow. Using CAPE alone, U.S. stocks still seemed expensive even after the bursting of the dot-com bubble and the 2008 financial crisis. On the other hand, CAPE has indicated stocks were pricey throughout the past six years during one of the strongest bull markets in history. Finally, Colas said S&Amp;; The P 500 itself is much more tech-heavy than at any other point in history, an important dynamic to consider when looking at past values. In 1980, for example, the energy sector accounted for 26% of the S&P 500 and the technical sector accounted for only 8%. Today, energy has a 2% weighting and tech has a 28% weighting. Colas said investors should not forget how much that kind of composition shift can have on the index's overall valuation. Each sector in the S&Amp;; The P 500 has its own fundamentals and thus its own valuation, he said. Benzinga's Take: Smart investors never ignore critical metrics like the CAPE ratio. But smart investors also know not to rely too much on a single measure. Investors need to understand exactly how the numbers are calculated, what the numbers are and don't tell them, and what other pieces of information will supplement these numbers to paint a full picture of what's happening in the market. IV (NASDAQ: CCIV) is one of the largest SPACs currently seeking a target. SPAC is linked as a finalist in the bidding for DIRECTV, which is sold by AT & T (NYSE:T). Hoch favors the valuation of SPAC trading closer to $10. Landing DIRECTV wouldn't be much, according to Hoch, and he said he would be more excited about another target. Cerberus Telecom Acquisition (NYSE: CTAC) is a SPAC led by CEO Tim Donahue, who is a former chairman of Sprint Nextel. Hoch calls it a long-term play based off of the chart. Thiel has a unique acumen for investing and picking winning startup ideas. Thiel is now making moves in the crypto world and we should pay attention. Everyone knows you're going to save for retirement, but a lot of people don't. Unfortunately, retirement without savings is not beautiful. The new public company Danimer Scientific is trying to shake up the plastics industry. It has some heavyweight early supporters. It can be a little difficult to get a consensus delivery number for Li Auto (ticker: LI) and other Chinese EV producers. Tesla (TSLA), for example, delivered more than 180,000 vehicles in the fourth quarter, which was better than the roughly 176,000 analysts counted, the company, on its third-quarter conference call, said it expected to deliver 11,000 to 12,000 vehicles in the fourth quarter. (Bloomberg) - Venezuela's government plans to move to a fully digital economy as hyperinflation has made useless bolivar notes virtually disappear, and dollarization expands through the local financial system. The U.S. dollar has served as a brisk for Venezuela amid U.S. sanctions and collapsing oil revenues, President Nicolas Maduro said in a televised interview with Telesur on Friday. He said 18.6% of all commercial transactions are in dollars, while 77.3% are carried out in bolivars with debit cards. Only 3.4% is paid with bolivar notes. They have a war on our physical currency. This year we are moving on to a more in-depth digital economy, in expansion. I have set the goal of an economy that is 100 percent digital, Maduro said, adding that physical money will eventually disappear. It is the latest ambitious currency plan from the President of Venezuela, with no guarantee of success. In 2017, with the bolivar in freefall, Maduro promised that the nation would create a cryptocurrency called Petro, backed by reserves of oil, gas, gold and diamonds. Petro launched in 2018; The U.S. called it a hoax. Venezuela's currency has lost 99% of its value over three years of hyperinflation, forcing the country to issue higher denomination banknotes that in turn become worthless in record time. Inflation soared 5,790% over the past 12 months, according to the Bloomberg News Cafe con Leche Index.The biggest note now in circulation, 50,000 bolivars, is worth about $0.04. The government has delayed plans to issue a 100,000 bolivar bill, which would currently be worth less than $0.10.Read more: Venezuela's Cafe Con Leche IndexAfter previously subsidized fuel prices were raised in June, cash is now used only to travel public transport, and the Caracas metro routinely stops charging passengers due to cash shortages. Since the end of 2019, local banks have slowly started offering accounts and financial products in US dollars, but they are still limited as there is no clearing system to enable digital transactions in US dollars. Some banks have held technical meetings with the Venezuelan Central Bank in an effort to resolve the problem amid high skepticism and caution due to U.S. sanctions. But Maduro promised to create payment formats that allow transactions with savings and checking accounts in U.S. dollars. A press official at the Central Bank of Venezuela did not immediately respond to a request for comment. Although he promised to expand the use of the U.S. dollar in the economy, Maduro said a formal dollarization would not happen. Venezuela has its currency and we will defend it, he said. Every week Benzinga conducts a sentiment survey to find out what traders are most excited about, interested in, or thinking about when managing and building their personal portfolios. We surveyed a group of over 500 investors about whether shares of Shopify Inc (NYSE: SHOP) will reach $2,000 by 2022. Shopify Stock Forecast Shopify offers an e-commerce platform primarily to small and medium-sized businesses. The e-commerce company has two leading segments that drive revenue: subscriptions and seller solutions. The subscription solutions segment enables Shopify merchants to engage in e-commerce on a variety of platforms, including the company's website, physical stores, pop-up stores, kiosks and social networks. Merchant solutions are defined as add-on products for the platform that facilitate e-commerce and include Shopify Payments, Shopify Shipping and Shopify Capital.The company's main e-commerce stock competitors include Amazon.com, Inc. (NASDAQ: AMZN), Alibaba Group Holding Ltd - ADR (NYSE: BABA) and Etsy Inc (NASDAQ: ETSY). Of Benzinga traders and investors surveyed, 67% said Shopify would reach $2,000 per share by the end of next year. Respondents said Shopify will continue to see strength in 2021 of continued nationwide adoption of online shopping, away from traditional brick-and-mortar retailers. Traders also said that even with nationwide distribution of a coronavirus vaccine already underway, the popularity of e-commerce will continue to grow. They believe American consumers like to be able to shop a variety of merchants at the same time and have their purchases delivered to their front door. Many traders and investors also said they are keen on Shopify's UI/UX, noting how the platform has a high user-friendliness for small and medium-sized retailers looking to take their business online. It should be noted the latest price target for Shopify was reported by Susquehanna on Dec 2. The analyst firm set a target of $950, expecting shares of the e-commerce company to fall within 12 months. Going into late 2020, Shopify shares were trading lower following the stock's recent surge, which was driven by e-commerce trends and holiday sales optimism. COVID-19 vaccine news has also driven a rotation from e-commerce names to reopening sectors such as traditional retail and travel. Current and potential investors should note Shopify's fourth-quarter earnings date is calculated for Feb. 17.
